Bishop Rowe, Bishop of Alaska, was one of the speakers last night at the missionary meeting held in St. John's Church, Lafayette square. The church everywhere is rejoicing in Bishop Rowe's determination to remain in Alaska instead of going to South Dakets, to which the House of Bishops had elected him. the House of Bishops had elected him. As Dean Grosvenor, of the New York Cathedral, expressed it, "We owe Bishop Rowe a debt of gratitude for his declination." * In the history of the church in America the present Bishop of Alaska will always be Rowe of Alaska and nothing else."

Another speaker was Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, missionary bishop-elect of Kyoto, Japan. His subject was "The practical effect of Christianity in the Orient."

Tucker has been so long known Mr. Tucker has been so long known as the successful president of St. Paul's College. Tokyo, that it will be hard to think of him in any other connection. When he turns his back on Tokyo and goes to Kyoto it will be a self-denying work on his part, but ne will go to a great field. It is to be, under God, the distinctively "native" work in Japan, and one quite exclusively among natives and to be done more or less by natives. Tokyo is the "forsign" city of Japan, and to be done more or less by natives.

Tokyo is the "foreign" city of Japan.

Kyoto is the "native" city. Happily, the church will have in Mr. Tucker at Kyoto a man of large vision and great experience.

The rall was well filled with the men of Anacostia, though there were two rows of vacant chairs in from which had been left severely alone. Drawing attention to these vacant chairs in a hail otherwise well filled. Dr. Smith began his address by saying he thought that those vacant chairs were typical of the places men were filling in the church. They were not in the front, as they should be. In all church work they ought to be in front, and one object of the Men and Religion Forward Movement was to bring them to the front. When that movement had done its work, those chairs and all others similarly placed would be filled. It was now high time they were filled.
